Invitation

Polymers have generated enormous interest in the field of biomedicine and healthcare. These materials have become an integral part of human life where people try to use innovative products and systems with innovative features. The advancement in the polymeric materials for biomedical applications over the past century has been largely due to the ongoing innovations in medical science and technology so as to provide the best medical facilities to the patients. It is, therefore, very important to have a close interaction of material scientists, biologists, pharmacologists and medical practitioners, so that a well defined goal and direction may be pursued towards the healthcare scenario for the world community.

Indian Institute of Technology (IIT) Delhi and ENEA, Rome, Italy are jointly organizing an International Conference on Polymeric Biomaterials, Bioengineering and Biodiagnostics 'Biomaterials-2014' under the auspices of Asian Polymer Association (APA) at New Delhi during October 27-30, 2014. The conference involves very innovative domains of polymeric biomaterials, biomaterial designing, nanomaterials, material-tissue interaction, wound care systems, drug delivery systems, pharmaceutical sciences, tissue engineering, antimicrobial chemistry, biodesign and medical applications. This conference is proposed to exchange information on new dimensions in healthcare systems and would address the polymeric biomaterial innovations in the healthcare sector as well as would help in formulating the action plan to face the challenges ahead in biomaterials and biomedical technology. A special session as Student Conclave will be a part of this event. This conference offers a very focused platform for the stakeholders to discuss, analyse and bring out policies and joint working groups in different areas of biomedical technology. We would like to extend our invitation for your participation in 'Biomaterials-2014' at New Delhi. We look forward to welcome you at New Delhi.

Sincerely
